Senate approves emergency money bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate gave final approval Tuesday to an emergency appropriations bill designed to supplement the state's budget until July 1.

The measure, which was approved on a 30-0 vote, differed substantially from the way in which funding was approved earlier in the House, and will consequently end up in a conference committee where a compromise between the two houses will have to be made.

Given final approval and sent to the desk of Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale was another appropriations bill which pays off a portion of the state's debt.

The Senate Appropriations Committee's emergency funding bill was essentially unchanged on the floor. It is substantially less than both the bill approved in the House and the one recommended by Teasdale.

The Senate bill also included a clause saying that no state school aid monies may be appropriatied for a school district for the period during which the district was struck by its teachers.

Sen. Don Manford, D+Kansas City, and chairman of the committee, suggested the language, which would seem to directly affect the state funding for the Kansas City School District, which is being struck by some of its teachers.

Manford agreed the language was meaningless because the funds had already been distributed by the state to the school district in Kansas City.

University City Democrat Harriett Woods, noting that the need for the language was questionable, tried to amend it out of the bill, saying it was "not a proper approach to legislation."

"What is alarming to me is the use of an appropriations bill for the presentation of policy we do not intend to fully discuss at this time," Woods said.

But Manford said the words represented a "red flag" from the Missouri Senate to the Kansas City School District regarding the "illegal strike."

But Woods noted that teachers, whether they were joining the strike or working for the district, would be denied state funds allocated to the district under the proposal.

After Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R+Ladue, said that adoption of Woods' amendment would make it appear the state Senate was supporting the strike, her proposal was overwhelmingly defeated on a voice vote.

The Senate's version of the emergency bill totals $42.8 million, far below the $69 million approved by the House and $105 million proposed by Teasdale.

In the House meanwhile, where primarily only routine matters were handled, tentative approval was given to elimination of the requirement that half of the 60-member state political party committees be women. Backers of that move claimed the requirement was added to the law only to insure that women be represented on the committees in the early days of women's suffrage.

Also gaining initial approval in the House were bills allowing second class county governing bodies to set speed limits on roads in unincorporated areas and making tampering with gas and water lines a felony.

All three measures must still gain final House approval before going to the Senate.

The bill dealing with the state political party committees would also expand the membership of the committees to at least 70 instead of 60 members and would not require the state party chairmen to be committee members when they are initially elected.

Teasdale, when he wanted to select his own state party chairman before last November's election, was denied the man he originally wanted because his selection was not a member of the state committee.

Money not so funny

The altered $10 bill in the top of this photograph was passed to Red's Auto Salvage in Miner Saturday, according to Miner City Marshal Bob Davis. The bottom bill is a good one. Davis said this is the first such bill to appear in his city, and that he is going around to every place of business in Miner to alert community businessmen of the possibility that the bills may show up again. Sikeston police say they have no record of any of the bills being passed in Sikeston. According to Secret Service officials in St. Louis, the deception is fairly common in larger metropolitan areas and the passing of the bill here may just be an isolated case. The secret servicemen urge those who are involved in handling money from the public to examine bills they take in, and if an altered bill is passed to them, to attempt to detain the person and call local police. If it is impossible to detain the individual, it is recommended that a description of the individual, any vehicle used and the license number be noted and given to authorities immediately.

Blytheville man escapes second time

KENNETT, Mo. (AP) — Authorities were concentrating their search in Pemiscott and Dunklin counties today for a 26-year-old Blytheville, Ark., man who escaped Tuesday from Dunklin County authorities.

A man fitting Phillip Wheat's description was spotted in Hayti Tuesday night, but police said no suspects were taken into custody.

Tuesday's escape marked the second time in a week Wheat has fled authorities. He escaped from an Arkansas jail last week.

Wheat, who originally had given police a ficticious name, broke away from Dunklin County Sheriff Tom Crunk as he was being taken back to jail following arraignment on a burglary charge.

A downpour Tuesday afternoon which flooded some streets hampered efforts to recapture Wheat, police said.

Wheat was arrested by Kennett police last Friday and was charged with trying to break into Presnell Hospital in Kennett, authorities said.

Man stabbed to death in San Juan formerly from Scott City

ST. LOUIS — The body of a man found stabbed to death more than a week ago in San Juan, Puerto, Rico, was identified Tuesday as Donald Blattel, a St. Louis-area schoolteacher, Puerto Rican police reported.

Blattel, 46, an English teacher at Ferguson Junior High School, had been vacationing in San Juan during his school's spring break, according to school officials.

Blattel, formerly of Scott City, attended St. Augustine Catholic grade school in Kelso, St.Mary's High School in Cape Girardeau and Southeast Missouri University in Cape Girardeau. He also served with the U.S. Navy for eight years.

Survivors include: Two sisters, Mrs. Ervin (Bernice) Urhahn of Benton, and Mrs. Zelma Scheper of Scott City; two brothers Harold F. Blattel of Scott City and Marvin Blattel of Kittery Maine; and one half brother Edward Hess of Chaffee Route Two.

Services will be held in St. Louis and are incomplete.

David Sanchez of the Puerto Rican police said Blattel's body was found the morning of April 10 near the ocean and behind a hotel.

Another police official said there were no papers or other means of identification on the body when it was found.

Sanchez said employes from the hotel where Blattel was staying reported him missing Saturday and again Monday.

Police investigated and learned of the unidentified body at the morgue. A hotel clerk identified the body as Blattel's. Sanchez said no arrests have been made in connection with the killing.

Blattel lived at the Hazelcrest Condominiums, 7545 Hazelcrest Dr., Hazelwood.

Ken Rueter, a neighbor and friend of Blattel's, said Blattel left on the trip April 9. He was due back in St. Louis Saturday night.

"We were supposed to meet at the (St. Louis) airport," Rueter said.

When Rueter learned Blattel was not on the flight, he said, he concluded Blattel had missed a plane in Miami and decided to stay there overnight.

But Blattel did not show up on a later flight, and Monday, when Rueter went to Blattel's apartment, he said, he found it locked.

"I checked with the school and they had not heard from him. So I called the hotel in San Juan. They had not seen him. But his luggage was still in his room along with the passport," Rueter said.

Rueter said hotel officials told him they had reported Blattel missing, but when he checked with police they said they had no report on it.

The identification of Blattel's body was confirmed with a check of his dental records Tuesday morning, Rueter said.

Rueter said Blattel was a bachelor.

Blattel had taught for 17 years at Ferguson Junior High, 701 January Ave. He was active with the school's drama club, according to principal Lee Ferguson. Blattel was a native of Cape Girardeau, according to Ferguson.

Rueter said Blattel had originally planned to go to El Salvador, but the tour was canceled and he changed his destination to San Juan. "It didn't make any difference to Don as long as there was some sun," Rueter said. He said Blattel was traveling alone, not in a tour group.

This was blattel's first visit to San Juan, according to Rueter. He had traveled to Europe once and took two trips to Greece in recent years, Rueter said.

"Don was not a venturesome type person," Rueter said. "He would not go into parts of town that were seamy. I was in Hong Kong last summer, and he thought it was amazing I would do that."

Carter to spell out details of energy policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will ask Congress to provide federal income tax credits to compensate lower income families who will be hit hard by the President's tough new energy plan, energy chief James R. Schlesinger said today.

As the President was putting final touches on his nationally televised energy speech to a joint session of Congress tonight, Schlesinger said a "substantial" credit would be tacked onto the already existing $35-per-person income tax credit all taxpayers can now claim.

Schlesinger, questioned after an appearance before the AFLCIO building trades department, declined to say specifically how large the tax credit would be, but some estimates run about $30 per taxpayer.

While the plan would apply to every taxpayer, in fact only lower income taxpayers would benefit.

As written now, the tax law allows each taxpayer to take a tax credit of $35 or two per cent of taxable gross income up to $9,000 income. Thus, the maximum tax credit is $180 now, and the Carter plan would simply raise the minimum tax credit.

Tax credits are subtracted from taxes owed.

Until Tuesday, a decision on how to compensate lower income families was the only undecided component of the energy package, scheduled to be sent to Capitol Hill following Carter's address to Congress.

A reduction in the Social Security payroll tax had been considered a likely vehicle for cushioning sharp increases in the cost of gasoline, heating oil and natural gas. There also were drafts of the plan which indicated that a per capita federal income tax credit would be used to return to consumers the revenue from a standby gasoline tax Carter is planning to propose. The Schlesinger disclosure appeared to supplant these two ideas.

Carter is expected to ask for a standby tax of up to 50 cents a gallon on each gallon of gasoline starting in 1979 unless Americans conserve gasoline.

In his speech to the union group, Schlesinger described declining energy reserves as "one of the most serious threats this country has ever faced."

P & Z to meet again on truck route issue

The Planning and Zoning Commission decided Tuesday night to call a special meeting with the traffic committee to discuss the list of 19 streets proposed as truck routes.

The truck route issue has created concern from firms that would use the routes and local residents who live along the routes.

City Manager charles Church told the commission that since discussion of the proposed truck routes at the last meeting he has received two requests to have additional streets added to the truck route. Inman Freight has asked that Broadway be included in the truck route and Sikeston Concrete has asked that a portion of Helen Street from Main Street to Ingram be included.

Citizens at the meeting expressed concern about adding any more streets to the routes proposed and listed wear and tear on the streets and heavy amount of traffic as the reasons for their concern.

Commission members believe the matter merits further study and plan to meet with the traffic committee before their next regular meeting.

In new business, the commission declined to approve a request from J. R. James, 733 Goodhope, to rezone the east half of block 8. East Acres from the A single- family classification to C multiple- family category. James, a Realtor, wanted to change the classification so he could put up a sign advertising his real estate office, which is located in his home. The single-family classification did not prohibit the office, but restrictions prevent signs advertising the nature of the business and the hiring of any non-family members as employes.

After some discussion, the commission refused to approve the rezoning request. James has recourse to take his request before the City Council.

The commission approved three rezoning requests. The first, from John Houchin, was a request to platte and approve a new subdivision called Freeman Addition from the A-single family classification to H-

The seizure, which occurred at 1:58 a.m., was the result of an extensive investigation by the Department of Public Safety, but charges are pending the investigation's conclusion.

Parked car stolen

The theft of a car, valued at $400, was reported to the Department of Public Safety Tuesday.

Robert G. Hampton, 814 Agnes St., told officers his 1969 Pontiac was stolen sometime between 6 a.m. and noon while it was parked on a lot outside the Pepsi-Cola Co. on South Kingshighway. He said the car was unlocked and the keys were in it at the time of the theft.

Splash------

An April shower turned into a downpour Tuesday, flooding Sikeston streets, dropping 1.69 inches of rain and giving much needed moisture to area gardens and crops. Even after the rain stopped Tuesday afternoon and the temperatures began to rise, many motorists were forced to keep their windows rolled up as they passed through high water areas, because of the few drivers who got their kicks plowing through the water at high speeds, spraying those unlucky enough to be meeting them.

ELECTION DAY REGISTRATION

One of the several electoral law reform proposals which the Carter administration has made to Congress calls for the election day registration of voters in federal elections. Any citizen who wish to vote for president, vice president, U.S. senator and representative need only go to the polling place on election day, register and cast his ballot, subject only to appropriate requirements of identification.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has greeted the proposal as a "brilliant and imaginative" solution to the confusion and irrationality of the present voter registration laws in most states.

Others are not so sure. Widespread fraud would be inevitable, they claim, especially if polling place officials were overwhelmed with waiting lines of people.

Some are afraid that the Republican party, which commands the allegiance of a steadily shrinking minority of voters, would be the loser. They point to the results of the last presidential election in Minnesota and Wisconsin, where election day registration was permitted. GOP congressional leaders, however, have voiced support of the proposal, apparently reasoning that the Republicans would stand to lose even more favor if they appeared to oppose something designed to encourage more Americans to vote.

Certain it is that election day registration would bring out voters in presidential election years in greater numbers than they have ever been brought out before. Millions of people are disfrancised every four years simply because they have moved from one state to another and have not established residency in time to be eligible to vote.

There must be many more millions who don't bother to register or always forget to register until too late, or who tune out of the weary presidential campaigns long before they are over, but who might be moved to stir their stumps when election day actually came around.

Which brings up yet another objection — that election day registration might result in a lot of purely impulse voting by a lot of thoughtless people.

If a person does not care enough about his government to take the trouble to register in advance and then to listen to the candidates and study the issues, it is asked, does the government have the responsibility of taking him by the hand and leading him to the voting booth?

But then, voter registration and voter discernment are not necessarily synonymous. Many people faithfully maintain their registration and faithfully vote in every election — for the straight party ticket, no matter who the candidates are.

Ideally, the right to choose the leaders of their country ought to be considered so precious by Americans that they would overcome all obstacles to exercise that right. But if the obstacles aren'r really necessary, why have them?

HEARTS ARE TRUMPS

Every family has favorite stories that are repeated each year at Christmastime. At our house, the one we will always remember occurred several years ago, when my brother, Richard, was seven years old.

Richard was the second-youngest of nine children. While he never lacked attention, he nevertheless had his little chores to do around the house. One Saturday afternoon, three days before Christmas, my mother was in her usual rush to get everything done in time for the 4:30 Confession. She asked Richard to go upstairs and polish her Sunday shoes. After awhile Richard brought down the shoes, obviously proud of the job he had done. Mother was so pleased, that she reached into her purse and handed him a quarter. A quarter was quite a treasure, especially three days before Christmas, but Richard looked puzzled. He took the money, picked up the shoes, and quietly went back upstairs. In a few minutes, mother rushed up to change her clothes. As she slipped her feet into the shiny shoes, her right foot hit a lump in the toe. She was half-annoyed and hurriedly pulled out a wad of paper. She unwrapped it and out fell a quarter. Written in a seven-year-old scrawl were the words, "I done it for love."

A NUCLEAR REGRESSION

The decision by Pakistani and French officials to proceed with the sale of a $150,000 uranium-reprocessing plant is bad news for a world already troubled by the spreading capacity for producing the ingredients of nuclear weapons.

The failure of Canadian and American efforts to talk the French and Pakistanis out of the deal is unfortunate. Threats to withdraw other forms of support, notably Canadian sale of uranium and possible U.S. sale of fighter planes, have been made. But isolation of Pakistan is not the answer.

The Pakistani purchase does have some theoretical merit. As an emerging nation, Pakistan's desire to become a technologically independent country is fully understandable. It is too bad that a policy of maintaining a monopoly of nuclear technology looks so much like a perpetuation of the old colonial patterns. Following completion of irrigation works made possible by the giant Tarbela dam, Pakistan may become an important agricultural producer, and that could lay the foundation for extensive industrial development.

But Pakistan is also tucked right in the middle of the world;s most volatile region and has been embroiled in a series of disputes and wars with neighboring India. While these disputes are tampered down for the moement, no one can be confident that they will not erupt again. Pakistan's rising influence in the Mideast, a certain product of its emerging economic power, may make her a party in the conflicts that seem to grow like weeds on the shores of the Persian Gulf and nearby waters. Adding nuclear potential to that area is a step backward.

There is, to be sure, a long process to go through before Pakistan learns how to make a bomb. But others have taken the necessary measures, and Pakistan's determination seems certain.

The experience is a new reminder that the nuclear powers -- including the Soviet Union -- have to develop workable agreements with the non-nuclear world for adequate safeguards against the spread of man's most lethal invention.

WHO WILL SWIM UPSTREAM?

From The Springfield (Mo.) Daily News

For no good reason, a lot of the steam seems to have leaked out of the "clean government" push set in motion by the Watergate scandals.

If, as we suspect, people in general are weary of scrutinizing dirty linen, and confused by the detailed business of retooling the machinery of government, that will be just fine with most members of Congress.

At least as disturbing as Richard Nixon's abuse of office is the likelihood that several members of Congress took cash from an agent of a foreign government, South Korea, for several years.

During Watergate, millions asked, is the President a crook? Who now asks, is American foreign policy for sale? If, as public reports suggest, South Korea was able to find in the House more than a few takers for its cash, then a cancer is at work on the legislative branch of government. The implications are profound and disturbing.

We have said that it is unreasonable to hold up modern statesmen against the standard of an idealized past, and we believe it. What chills us is that the new knowledge of official misconduct produces not public demand for a higher standard, but seeming public acceptance that chronic corruption is a part of public life.

There are three causes to hope the public may rediscover the principle that there are things that are wrong, things that can be tolerated only at the price of our collective self-respect.

There is, first, the dependable presence of Common Cause and similar "clean government" lobbies. There is, second, the encouragingly tough ethics code imposed by the President on himself and his top 2000 executive branch appointees.

There is, finally, the brave commitment of House Speaker Thomas O'Neill to "do something" about raising the ethical tone of the lower chamber. There is plenty to work on, if O'Neill is serious: the South Korean money, the hunting trips from defense contactors, the secrecy that shrouds the outside income and private interests of lawmakers. The job is at least as big in the Senate.

Before long, the new leaders of Congress will tell us by their actions if they own the nerve to start swimming upstream.

South Missouri Forges Ahead

In the recent state-wide Community Development award contests, over 30 Missouri communities received awards for forging ahead in community and area work.

Of those, only twelve were in North Missouri, the other 18 or 20 in South Missouri, many in the Ozark region.

Not too many years ago, most of such citations for excellence and progress would have gone to North Missouri towns and villages.

Many South Missouri centers are fairly new, and often dominated by young, ambitious and energetic business people and other citizens. Too many of our North Missouri towns are just the opposite.

Our towns are not winning their share of the citations. It may be because our leaders do not enter the contests (you must enter in order to be eligible to win), or it may be because we just do not have the zip and enthusiasm of the newer population centers. Whatever the reason, North Missouri needs to get busy and get its part of those awards.

Inside Labor

Labor Leaders Shocked: San Francisco sues union chiefs for 'heavy damages' during 1976 municipal strike

WASHINGTON— Hottest conversation piece in town as thousands of hard hats run their own mini-convention here is a tale of legal woe brought in by union craftsmen from San Francisco -- the biggest little labor town in the world.

That seven-hilled California city is suing 15 AFL-CIO building and construction trades locals and Machinists and Transport Workers affiliates.

Also hit by this municipality's civil action are the unions' top officials, their business agents and some of their employes.

And 500 rank-and-file members as "John Does."

Not neglected in this unprecedented city legal action seeking $14,293,601.55 in damages resulting from last year's illegal mini-strike against the community are the international unions which charger the locals. Most of their central headquarters are located here in the capital.

But it isn't the money. That could come out of petty cash. It's the principle which is shocking the principals under counterattack.

The plaintiff, meaning the city of San Francisco, is suing the "defendants ... individually" as well as "in their respective official capacities."

And though the city's attorney, Thomas M. O'Connor, who brought the action on March 29, says he doesn't yet know the names of the John Does, he is asking the Superior Court for the privilege of inserting their identities when the rank-and-filers who participated in the strike are discovered.

Rurther, if the municipality wins, O'Connor, who was directed to sue the unions and officials and members et al. by the city's board of supervisors, could seize the personal funds and other properties of local and national union officials who ran the stoppage from March 30 to May 8. 1976.

All this shatters as many precedents as Jerry Ford whips up divots on a bad golfing day. With the possible exception of one suit brought by Pasadena (Calif.) against striking teachers, no such massive legal action has been taken against unionists in almost 75 years.

Rarely have labor leaders been sued individually.

Note, please, that his hard-hitting suit, which actually is seeking far more than the $14.3 million in penalty costs, has been hurled at labor's establishment unions by what long has been considered the toughest total pro-labor town in the land. It's the city of aging longshoreman Harry Bridges, who led the famed 1934 general strike there.

It's the hilly town of ex-Mayor Alioto who told an AFL-CIO convention there in 1975 that if he had to make a choice between the great street cleaners union and the Chamber of Commerce, he'd take the garbage men.

So, what the national labor leaders fear is that San Francisco could be a sign of unpopular times for all unions. It may well be the sharp turning of the political weather vane. It could mark the declaration of war by municipalities against their unions -- not only those in the public sector, but also the private industrial crafts dealing with "the people."

It all springs from last year's strike by unions such as the bricklayers, the plumbers, the electrical workers, the machinists, tile layers, iron workers, blacksmiths, boilermakers and hod carriers for higher pay and against what they said would be a cutback in income.

The Machinists and the Transport Workers Union Local 250A went "shoulder to shoulder" with their fellow workers. The latter's action didn't hurt BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) much, but did stall buses and cable cars with those enchanting cling-clanging bells.

I've examined the city's charges. They're tough.

They spin out words charging labor leaders and others as acting "illegally ... intentionally ... deliverately ... maliciously ... recklessly" to tie up the city. And to destroy community and "personal" property. And for the "purpose of injuring plaintiff (San Francisco -- VR) and coercing plaintiff to bestow economic benefits upon defendants (the unions -- VR)."

To total up the alleged damages, the city avows that the strike caused "plaintiff to lose revenue it would otherwise have received; by causing plaintiff to incur increased operating expenses; by causing injury to plaintiffs' real and personal property and by depriving plaintiff of the means of caring for said property."

In its court papers, the city avers that it was illegally picketed. And that unionists, "by unlawfully and willfully instructing and encouraging employes of plaintiff to fail, neglect and refuse to perform their duties and services of employment for plaintiff" caused damage.

Also "by disseminating instructions, directions and requests for strike action to plaintiff's employees ... with the intent to impair restrict or terminate, plaintiff's operations," they hurt the city.

Meaning, the strikers wanted to shut down San Francisco.

For the loss of revenue during the '76 strike, which the Superior Court has ruled illegal, the city is claiming $5.06 million, according to the city attorney's documents. Also the "loss of services of its (San Francisco) employees (was) in the amount of not less than $8.4 million." There's an intriguing item in the court papers stating that San Francisco incurred "increased operating expenes in an amount ...of $890,419.55" because of the stoppage. The city also wants money back for damages to its real and personal property " through neglect" during the walkout.

As I said, it isn't the money. It's the principle. And the fact that the city with a union label, the city of a historic general strike, should take such action. It now has more wonders than hills.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

When the Bakke case, now under consideration by the U.S. Supreme Court, is decided, it will probably break wide open the controversy that started to burst in the recent flap about whether Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. supports racial and sexual job quotas under that name or disguised under a less-abrasive label such as affirmative action.

The Bakke case came to the Supreme Court on appeal from the California Supreme Court which held that a racial quota for admission to the University of California Medical School violates the constitutional rights of nonminority applicants by giving preference on the basis of race.

When Califano said he supports racial and sexual quotas in employment and education, 44 educators rose in collective indignation, accusing him of a "flagrant defiance of the law."

Dr. Sidney Hook, a leading spokesman for that group, once summarized their position rather colorfully. Racial and sexual quotas are just as ridiculous, he said, as it would be to give blacks and women each two or more votes in order to redress the discrimination their ancestors suffered when they were deprived of the franchise.

While federal law today prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of race, religion or sex, it also authorizes affirmative action of an undefined extent.

The word quota is usually avoided because, as Califano ruefully admitted, "it's obviously a nerve-jangling word," but an assortment of synonyms is used, including goals, timetables and intermediate targets, as well as affirmative action.

The semantic controversy does not reach the core of the problem. The real question is, in periods when there are not enough jobs to go around, or in situations where there are several or many applicants with roughly the same qualifications, who should get the job?

To society, this is a question of great social and economic importance. To the individual involved, it may be a question of enough to eat, or a decent standard of living, or going on welfare.

The quota advocates, such as Califano, argue that jobs should be awarded as a remedy for past racial and sexual discrimination. The fallacy in this position is that the persons reaping the benefits are not the persons who suffered the wrongs. Racial or sexual quotas do not correct discriminations that occurred one or more generations ago. Such quotas unjustly reward and penalize persons today who had nothing to do with the sins of the past.

It is unjust for a job preference (for reasons of race, sex, or past discrimination) to be given to a second wage-earner in a family instead of to one in a family that has no wage-earner at all.

Other alternatives should be explored for solving the question of who should get the job preference in those many cases where individual qualifications are not a factor. A more moral criterion would be to give the job to that person, regardless of race, religion or sex, who is supporting a family.

The use of this criterion would not only be more just, but it would safeguard the dignity and economic independence of the family. It would alsogive welcome relief to the hard-pressed taxpayers by reducing the welfare burden. Obviously, a welfare applicant with a half-dozen dependents costs the taxpayers more than a welfare applicant with none..

This standard would be fair to all races and both sexes, and has the logic of simple justice.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Creditors Fight Over Remains Of Tongsun Park's Business

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON: The private papers of Tongsun Park reveal that the Korean influence peddler's international economic empire has become a business junkyard, with creditors and taxmen fighting over the remnants while his skeleton staff bemoans the confusion.

We were the first to report on Park's shennanigans in 1974 when we found him gallavanting around the Middle East with then-Rep. Richard Hanna, D-Calif. Hanna wasn't, we learned, the only congressman who was cozy with Park.

The well connected Korean has been a shadowy figure in Washington's power circles since the late 1960s. He has entertained such notables as House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., and former President Gerald Ford.

But now the bespectacled, cherubic Park is a pariah in Washington. The Internal Revenue Service claims he owes $4.5 million in back taxes. The taxmen have filed liens against his bank accounts and have seized two of his posh houses. Park has fled the country, and was last reported ensconced in London, safe from the subpoena powers of the numerous U.S. government investigations.

In addition to his impounded property, Park has left behind the shell of his major business creation, Pacific Development, Inc. Many of its records have been masticated by shredding machines in the manner of an embattled foreign embassy. But reporters Lew Perdue and Ken Cummins have obtained documents which escaped the shredders. These private papers show the side of Tongsun Park which he tried to keep hidden for years while he wined and dined his way around the globe.

The documents show Park was never one to go second class. Air France presented the gallavanting entrepreneur with a certificate when he crossed the sound barrier aboard a Concorde on Sept. 30, 1976. But the documents also show that Park had a tendency not to pay for his first-class adventures.

The Abu Dhabi Hilton recently wrote Park about his $5,580.06 outstanding bill and London's posh Claridge Hotel has sternly demanded payment of overdue bills from November 1976, for more than 500 British pounds. Other internal memos indicate that Park probably stiffed at least one American hotel.

His financial fandangos have also astounded a number of the American banks which once welcomed the Korean's business. On June 23, 1975, for example, the Riggs National Bank of Washington sent Park a friendly reminder that his account was slightly overdrawn to the tune of $194,284.44. And the National Bank of Washington has sent PDI a final notice that a $2,246.42 payment is due on a loan. According to the notice, "Further delinquency cannot be permitted."

Park's papers indicate that the American Express company has jerked Park's credit-card privileges. Meanwhile, his Washington staff is floundering, pleading for a "definite chain of command," someone to bring order as it triesto decide which creditor to stave off next with a token payment.

Humor sometimes creeps into the chaos at Pacific Development. A company official, for example, accidentally omitted a name from the staff payroll. He explained in a memo, "In my hurry to spend the money, (the house and corporate cars had been taken by Internal Revenue the previous night) I forgot to add the $6,000 for Mr. Lee to the list."

But at least one of Park's old friends and creditors hasn't turned her back on him. Beautiful, blond Washington socialite Tandy Meems Dickinson graced many of Park's social events. We found an Oct. 10, 1975 promissory note from Park to Dickinson for $50,000 (plus 12 percent interest), given by him "for value received."

Dickinson told us she was aware of the $50,000 matter, but she referred us to her business manager, Richard Staples, for the details. Staples, who is also a director of Park's company, had a spokesman tell us he had no comment on that or any other of our questions.

"It's all legitimate," Dickinson assured us. "There's nothing hanky-panky about that, I can guarantee it 100 percent."

The lovely Dickinson described herself to our associate Jim Grady as "just a simple Southern girl." She pointed out that she was wealthy in her own right, adding, "My attraction to Tongsun was just for simple pleasure, you know, for simple friendship...He's just a pal of mine."

Nor have the scandals about his political dealings and his shady financial operations changed her mind. "As far as I can see," she said, "the man is OK."

Footnote: We contacted all the financial institutions the documents linked to Park. None of them wished to elaborate. A spokesman for Pacific Development refered us to an attorney, who had no comment. Our attempts to reach Park for direct comment were fruitless.

Inside The White House: Jimmy Carter never stopped campaigning after he won the election. This has stirred criticism that he is all style and no substance. But private soundings indicate that his strategy has paid off. He has bolstered his popularity with the people, thus strengthening his ability to cope with Congress. Meanwhile, he has been quietly courting alienated liberals, with varying success.

— Rep. John Dent, D-Pa., an unabashed labor champion who keeps a lump of coal on his desk, paid a private call on President Carter the other day to seek his support for a $2.85 hourly minimum wage. The President seemed to agree; he promised to consult Dent befre endorsing any lesser figure. The next day, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall announced that the Carter administration supported a $2.50 minimum. So much for consultation.

— Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., dean of the House's liberal wing, was invited to the White House recently for a private luncheon with the President. They discussed national issues over bacon-lettuce-and-tomato sandwiches and southern-style peanut brittle. One a personal note, Carter consoled Burton over his one-vote loss to Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., in the race for majority leader. Burton let the president know that the liberals had not given up the game. "It's just one inning," he said, "in the ball game."

Today's news in brief

Arson suspected in hotel fire

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Firemen are digging through the debris of the Central Hotel here, searching for 20 missing guests. Arson is suspected, police said.

Eight charred bodies, including those of five children, were pulled from the ruins of the 60-year-old hotel Tuesday.

Thirteen persons were injured, although only four were admitted to John Sealy Hospital where their condition ranged from good to fair.

The hotel, a five-story brick building about two blocks from the this Gulf port city's docks, burned to the ground. The fire also damaged a furniture store and a drugstore.

The fire spread rapidly and sealed off the narrow entrance to the hotel, police said.

Officers estimated that about 50 persons were in the building when the fire erupted. Some escaped by jumping from windows.

"There is some suspicion of arson since the fire broke out in three different locations simultaneously," said police.

Speeding conviction reversed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The conviction of a man allegedly caught speeding in 1975 has been reversed because the Missouri Highway Patrol failed to check the accuracy of its radar unit.

In a decision handed down Tuesday, the Missouri Court of Appeals said there was insufficient evidence to show that two devices used to test the radar were themselves accurate.

The ruling came in the case of a man convicted in Cape Girardeau County Circuit Court of driving over the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit.

Last year the appeals court made a similar ruling in which Ballwin police arrested a driver on the basis of a radar check.

License plate changes eyed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A House committee has ordered special consideration for instituting personalized license plates coupled with a return to multi-year license tags.

The action gives life to the bill, which was stalled behind 17 other measures on the regular House schedule.

"This bill could make some money for the state of Missouri if it is passed," said Rep. Russell Goward, D+St. Louis, in gaining unanimous support of the House Rules Committee to move the bill to the special schedule.

The proposal, which has been unsuccessful in past sessions, would save an estimated $1 million a year in the cost of vehicle licensing, and is a priority of Gov. Joseph Teasdale.

Persons could obtain special personalized license plates for a fee of $24 a year in addition to the normal license plate charge, under provisions of the bill. The plates would be issued for a period of at least five years with annual vehicle registration shown by a tab attached to the plates during the fiveyear period.

Hike to 16-cent stamp delayed

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — It probably will be next spring before we have to lick 16-cent stamps to send first class letters. The delayed postal increase is due to a surprising $45.5 million operating surplus for the U.S. Postal Service.

Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar said the surplus came from a decrease — through attrition — in the number of postal employes, down from 740,000 to 653,000 during the past two years.

The surplus for the six months ending March 31 compares to a $1 billion deficit during the previous fiscal year. Postal authorities were checking records to try to find the last time a surplus existed.

"For the first time since postal reorganization, we have a firm hold on our costs and are succesfully managing our resources," Bailar said Tuesday at the National Postal Forum.

"As a result, we have been able to put off the need for rate increases until sometime in the springtime of 1978," he said. At that time, he said, the cost of a first-class letter will probably increase to 16 cents.

GNP gain highest in year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's Gross National Product increased at an annual rate of 5.2 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, the largest gain in a year and a signal of an improving economy, the government announced today.

The GNP indicator, which measures the market value of the goods and services produced in the country, might have been bigger still except for the severe winter weather, the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said.

"The extremely cold weather in January and February reduced the increase in real output and final sales and boosted prices in the first quarter. The extremely cold weather probably reduced the increase in real output by 1.5 percentage points at an annual rate ... the bureau said.

Zaire forces claim advances

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire's government claimed Pygmy warriors fighting for it moved deep into rebel-held territory and surrounded the rail town of Mutshatsha. Diplomatic sources said other government forces advanced 12 miles against scattered resistance. A government spokesman said "elite Pygmy bowmen" encircled Mutshatsha, 60 miles west of the copper-mining center of Kolwezi. These sources said there were casualties on both sides in fighting with small arms and mortars, and the retreating rebels were reported planting land mines on the roads.

Leftists threaten Borgonovo

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftists have threatened to kill Foreign Minister Mauricio Borgonovo unless the government releases 36 political prisoners and flies them out of the country. Police and government officials would not comment on the demand and refused to confirm or deny that Borgonovo had been kidnaped. Diplomatic sources said he disappeared Tuesday, and two statements signed by the Farabundo Marti Popular Liberation Front said that underground group was holding him captive.

Carter miffed at predecessor

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the 38th and 39th Presidents of the United States, the honeymoon appears to be over. Jimmy Carter is miffed at criticisms from his predecessor, Gerald R. Ford. When he left office three months ago, Ford said he intended to refrain from criticizing his successor for some time because "I'm going to be busy, he'll be busy and I wish him the very, very best as he takes on some tough responsibilities." But in recent weeks Ford has spoken out in public about Carter's economic policies and his handling of disarmament talks. On Tuesday, the present occupants of the White House bristled. Both President Carter and Vice President Walter F. Mondale, in remarks to congressional leaders at a breakfast meeting, took Ford to task.

Senate studies tax breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $50 tax rebates are gone from the Senate's version of President Carter's streamlined economic stimulus plan, but the bill still would provide a tax break for 45 million taxpayers who take the standard deduction. The Senate on Tuesday complied with Carter's decision to scrap the $10 billion tax rebate plan. It is arguing over his request to abandon proposed tax breaks for business worth $3.3 billion over two years.

Upgraded discharges unheeded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army officials, concerned about the apparent lack of interest in President Carter's program to upgrade less-than-honorable military discharges from the Vietnam era, are launching an advertising campaign to spur the response. Only about 15,000 veterans out of a potential 432,-500 have made inquiries in the first 14 days of the program, and the number of calls has been dropping.

Dear Ann Landers

Husband changes when his mother visits

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's mother lives a considerable distance from us. She comes to visit once a year and never stays more than a week. I enjoy her company. We get along just fine.

It's my husband I'm writing about. When his mother arrives he becomes a totally different person. This year it was worse than usual. He came home late every night -- falling down drunk, picked fights with me, his son, or his mother. In plain language, he behaved just rotten.

His mother asked me how I stand it. I hated to tell her he only behaves that way when she's around. I'd rather die than hurt her feelings.

I've begged and pleaded with my husband not to drink like a fish when his mother visits. He always promises to stay sober "next time" but for some mysterious reason he has to get liquored up when she's around. What's the matter with him anyway? What can I do to help? -- Diane

Dear D.: You don't have to be a psychiatrist to figure this one out. Your husband is suffering from unresolved conflicts involving his mother. When she appears on the scene he just can't handle it. So he turns to booze to anesthetize himself and in this way he avoids a head-on collision.

If your husband wants to find out what's bugging him, he'll go for some counseling. Once the problem is identified he can work on resolving it. I hope he does because "mother problems" manifest themselves in many areas of a male's life.

Dear Ann: May I add a few pointers for those who want to help the handicapped?

I have observed several kind folks attempting to help a blind person cross the street. Invariably, they grab an arm or an elbow. This throws the unsighted individual off balance. The best approach is to let him take YOUR arm. Second suggestion: When a handicapped person who is accompanied by an attendant or friend asks for information, do not address your reply to the other person. This is galling to the handicapped individual who may be as alert or intelligent as you or I. He is made to feel stupid, unable to speak for himself or simply not there.

These are psychological points, but to the handicapped they are as vital as ramps or elevators. Please get the message across, Ann. -- Illinois

Dear Illinois: Your letter has helped educate millions today. As one who is vitally interested in the handicapped, I thank you.

Dear Ann: I'm 42, depressed, menopausal and seeing a shrink.

I married my present husband in 1968 and have cheated on him several times. Suddently I have come to my senses. I realize how lucky I am to have him and have decided never to cheat on him again. The guilt is getting to me. Should I confess? He's a good person and loves me a lot. I'm sure he'd be very upset if he knew. In fact, he'd probably kick me out.

My shrink can't help me so I'm turning to you. -- Seattleite.

Dear S.: My advice is to keep your mouth shut unless you want to get kicked out. More advice. Get another shrink. If your present one was any good you wouldn't be writing to me.

Drugs? How much is too much? Is pot O.K.? Is L.S.D. too much? If you're on dope or considering it, get Ann Landers's new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." Plant growing therapy leads to sweepstakes prize

By SHIRLEY PRITCHETT and JILL CORTI

CHARLESTON— When one drives by Economy Furniture Store, 209 W. Commercial St., little would he or she dream that the building also houses the nine blue ribbon-winning plants or the sweepstakes winner in this year's Molly French Garden Club flower show. The show, which was held Sunday at the Charleston Library, is part of the annual Dogwood-Azalea Festival.

Mrs. Lil Cox, the green thumb artist, proudly displays her ribbons and sweepstakes award in a solarium above the store in her and husband Raleigh's apartment.

The solarium, which was built in October, contains many plants from various parts of the United States, and provides the family a comfortable spot to relax.

The nine ribbon winners include African violets, an avocado plant, shamrocks, staghorn, planter, bromelaid, Swedish ivy and rope vine.

Besides the many plants, Mrs. Cox also grows tomatoes year-round on two huge tomato vines which cover the west wall.

The solarium, which Mrs. Cox designed and helped to build, is constructed of wood shingles, astro-turf, glass windows and growlights. The Coxes built the solarium because the plants had been grown in the kitchen and sometimes got in the way of whoever was eating at the table.

The Coxes are the parents of two daughters, Shirley Bowes of Charleston and Judy Streng of Leona Valley, Calif., and four grandchildren, Darrin, 11, and Scott Bowes, 8, and Lynn 14, and Rusty Streng, 12.

Mrs. Cox says she really doesn't spend much time with her plants because her family and business come first. She suspects she inherited her hobby of raising plants from her 84-year-old father who also grows plants.

This was the first time Mrs. Cox has entered the flower show, and she indicated she had no idea she would become the sweepstakes winner. "I had never entered before, and I learned a lot."

One mistake Mrs. Cox made that she feels others should know is that judges in a flower show don't mind if you clean the plant just as long as you don't spray; and be sure the plant is natural.

Her secret to raising plants is using African violet potting soil and fertilizer. She uses the fertilizer regularly, not monthly as some do. She mixes her fertilizer at the rate of one-fourth teaspoon of fertilizer to one gallon of water.

Mrs. Cox also sings to her plants and, during stormy weather such as Tuesday's, she plays a little FM music. She said she "doesn't know if it will help, but it can't hurt."

Many of her plants are gifts from friends and her brother in Poplar Bluff, who starts plants from seeds. Others she collects when she takes a vacation or travels some distance.

When asked if she prefers clay over plastic pots, Mrs. Cox replied that she has no preference. "Some say plants breathe easier in clay pots, but I can't tell."

Others, she added, claim violets should be grown in clay pots because of moisture reasons.

Hermethod for taking care of this is the use of wick watering. Wick watering is when you place a wick in the soil so that it dangles from the bottom of the pot and is placed in water. The plant then absorbs the amount of moisture it needs and when it needs it.

Mrs. Cox says her solarium is "something to putter with" and that raising plants is my therapy."

Sweepstakes Winner displays plants

Mrs. Lil Cox of Charleston proudly displays her prize winning plants inside the solarium. The solarium which is constructed of wood shings, glass doors, astro-turf carpet and grow lights was designed by Mrs. Cox and built in October. Mrs. Cox was this years Molly French Garden Club Sweepstakes winner during the annual Dogwood-Azalea Festival in Charleston.

Budget proposal protested

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The executive director of the Missouri Elections Commission says the effectiveness of that panel "would be virtually nil" if the Senate Appropriations Committee's budget recommendation is approved.

The committee is proposing the commission, which is responsible for administering and enforcing the Campaign Finance and Disclosure Act of 1974, be reduced from 23 staff members to two.

The committee's staff has yet to calculate the exact amount of funding involved, but it will be substantially less than the $453,356 recommended by Gov. Joseph Teasdale and already approved by the House. The cut must still be formally adopted by the committee.

"We're very disturbed because if the appropriations go through as the Senate committee recommends, the effectiveness of enforcement of the campaign law is pretty well eliminated," Jack Pletz, commission executive director said.

Sen. Donald Manford, D-Kansas City, chairman of the Appropriations Committee said the budget recommendation was made because the status of the commission is in doubt.

Cole County Circuit Court Judge Byron Kinder ruled the 1974 law setting up the commission unconstitutional last fall. The case has been appealed to the Missouri Supreme Court, which will hear arguments on it next Month.

"We're not going to commit money to the agency until we see where we are," Manford said.

Manford said the committee will consider revising the commission's appropriations if the court rules that it can function under the law. But the high court decision is not expected until after the legislature adjourns in mid-June.

The six members of the commission, according to Pletz, said they were surprised and disappointed at the recommendation. They are hopeful the Senate will restore the budget to the original request, he said.

"Without a staff there is no administration or enforcement by the commission," Pletz said. "I think an independent commission is still a viable concept and an important safeguard."

Peppi Ramundo, a Cincinnati custom tailor, made a suit for football star Bob Brown that required six yards of cloth. Brown is 6 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 285 pounds.

New York downs Cards, 5-2

Mets' boss makes right moves

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "You can't always call the right shot," said Joe Frazier, who nonetheless did.

Frazier, the manager of the New York Mets, succeeded at a 4-for-4 clip in the decision-making department Tuesday night and a 5-2 Mets triumph resulted.

"Some days you do and some days you don't," suggested Frazier while shrugging off his part in a verdict over the St. Louis Cardinals he attributed to "getting runs and catching the ball."

"You can't always guess right," he said in reference to less successful moves by his Cards counterpart, Vern Rapp.

"John Milner can hit left-handers real good," he said. "And Skip Lockwood has got great velocity as a reliever. He's kind of the Al Hrabosky type."

Milner, who scored the winning run in a pinch role for Joe Torre, remained in the line-up to single in an insurance run for the Mets, who climbed back from a 2-0 deficit.

Lockwood's part came later in relief of Jerry Koosman to check a bases-loaded, two-out threat by St. Louis in the eighth inning.

Pinch-hitter Keith Hernandez fouled to Milner in left field to extinguish that threat and Lockwood worked past Ken Reitz' leadoff single in the ninth by fashioning two strike-outs.

Meanwhile two additional Mets players, Ed Kranepool and Mike Phillips, also provided major contributions when summoned from the bench by Frazier.

Kranepool drove a sacrifice fly off Clay Carroll to score Milner with the winning run after loser Pete Falcone, 0-2, walked Torre and exited following a one-out single by John Stearns in the sixth.

Two innings later, on the heels of Milner's RBI hit in the seventh, Phillips laced a double that chased home Stearns with New York's concluding run.

Frazier's timely maneuvers, combined with the ability of Koosman, 1-1, to recover from a bad start, overcame a Cards lead built on Hector Cruz' two-run homer in the second inning.

"It was a constant struggle," said Koosman, who walked five but weathered the wildness by rationing St. Louis to five of its six hits.

Hrabosky not angry

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Al Hrabosky remains angry but not in the sense that he's quarreling with the mound manipulations of new St. Louis Cardinals Manager Vern Rapp.

In fact, says the Mad Hungarian, he endorses a deference to other relief pitchers demonstrated by Rapp during the early stages of the National League season.

"You know what that does to me?" Hrabosky responded when asked how he feels about fewer strolls to date from bullpen to mound.

"That makes me extremely happy," he said. "Last year when there was free agentry for the first time I was the biggest supporter of the Cardinals going out for help.

"I need somebody to pick me up," said Hrabosky, the backbone of a reconstructed St. Louis relief corps along with right-hander Clay Carroll.

"I'm tickled to death to see some of the others get the experience. We have to see what they can do. We have to pick each other up."

Hrabosky, who a year ago pitched in a club-record 68 games, sat idle from the season's opening day April 7 until used twice during a series last weekend against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Meanwhile newcomer John Urrea was summoned for two relief stints in the Cards' first six games and responded both

"One acorn doesn't make a fall," he said. "We'll snap back."

Then he acknowledged he had to treat baseball as he does his business.

"In a big corporation, if the earnings are poor, what do you do? You replace the president," he said. "In baseball, it's the manager. His job is to produce or else."

Martin may have anticipated this punch earlier in the week when, before starting the calamitous series with the expansion Toronto Blue Jays, he quipped: "If I'm gonna be fired, I'm gonna be fired my way."

Martin's managerial career has followed a fixed pattern. Aggressive, thoroughly likeable, good in his relationship with players, he has moved into dormant situations and produced winners. Then, when apparently on top of the baseball world, he has been dumped.

Some have said he has a faculty for alienating his bosses through sheer bull-headedness.

Grimsley's SPORTS WORLD

NEW YORK (AP) — Fiery, combative Billy Martin is walking a tightrope as boss of the beleaguered New York Yankees.

One slip and the little gut fighter, survivor of countless on-and-off-the-field brawls, may find his managerial career following the same imponderable course that marked his abbreviated tenures first with Minnesota, then Detroit and finally Texas.

Call them the "Second Time Around Blues." Or "Blahs."

What mysterious quirk is there in the personality of a man who can take a baseball club, turn it into an instant winner and then suddenly find himself out of a job?

Television commercials kid about fading popularity in hawking their deodorants and mouthwashes. With Billy Martin, it is nothing so personal. His abrupt falls from grace in the past apparently can be traced almost exclusively to an unbending independence and an arrogance in dealing with his employers.

In the case of George Steinbrenner, a stubborn and iron-willed individualist himself, this could be catastrophic for Martin.

Steinbrenner didn't create a shipbuilding empire by being a shrinking violet. Neither did he throw his hard-earned millions into baseball without expecting some deference from the men to whom he is paying, in many cases, unrealistic salaries.

Returning to Yankee Stadium to find his gold-plated Yankees mired in the cellar after losing eight of their first 10 games, Steinbrenner called the team into the locker room Tuesday, gave them a good chewing out and handed Manager Martin a tentative vote of confidence.

More aggressive White bad news for Twins

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Quiet, unassuming Frank White vowed to adopt a new demeanor against the Minnesota Twins Tuesday night.

One single, one double and one home run later it was beginning to look like the Twins would have to drive a stake through his heart.

"I just hadn't been feeling aggressive enough at the plate," said the sure-handed Kansas City second baseman, whose batting average had been waffling around the .140 depths.

"I just decided to let it go and see what happened."

White's leadoff home run was the first of eight hits Kansas City uncorked in a seven-run explosion in the fifth inning. His two-run double was the eighth, and the Royals went on to crush the Twins, 11-3.

"I got to thinking that I'd been too defensive at the plate," he said. "I told myself that instead of going up there and hoping something good would happen, I'd try to make something happen.

"I didn't choke up on the bat as much and I didn't bend over at the plate quite as much, either. All in all, I just wanted to feel more aggressive up there."

A Kansas City native who grew up two blocks from the old Municipal Stadium, White hit .229 last year in his first full season as a regular.

"I think," he said with a wry grin, "I'll stay with this new style til they find out how to get me out."

Centerfielder Amos Otis, who cracked a two-run triple in the third, homered deep into the Twins' bullpen to drive across two of the Royals' fifth-inning runs. Hal McRae contributed a triple to the explosion and

NEW YORK — Tom Seaver of the New York Mets was named National League Player of the Week.

FOOTBALL

SAN FRANCISCO — Ken Meyer, an assistant coach with the Los Angeles Rams, was named head coach of the San Francisco 49ers.

TENNIS

DENVER — Ove Bengston of Sweden upset Phil Dent of Australia 6-2, 6-2 in the first round of a $100,000 Grand Prix Tennis Classic.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Tom Okker of The Netherlands upset top-seeded Dick Stockton 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 in the first round of the World Championship Tennis tournament.

Army football coach Homer Smith is the 27th man to coach the Cadet gridders.

EARL ONCE A CENTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl (the Pearl) Monroe of the New York Knickerbockers of the NBA is 6 foot 3½, on the small side for a pro basketball star. But he jumped center in high school competition.

"In those days I always played with my back to the basket," Earl recalled. "I learned many scoring moves which I still use in the NBA."

Opposing players and coaches insist now, however, that many of Monroe's moves were not learned in high school. "I've always had the ability to ad-lib," he explained.

Ken Meyer gets 49er position

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ken Meyer, who replaces untameable Monte Clark as head coach of the San Francisco 49ers, says he won't have any problems getting along with controversial General Manager Joe Thomas.

"The lines of demarcation have been spelled out and I'm perfectly satisfied with what I have," said Meyer, until Tuesday the offensive coordinator of the rival Los Angeles Rams.

"I never get involved in the Xs and Os," added Thomas. "The coach makes the decisions on the field and I'm responsible for personnel — the draft and cutting."

Both Thomas and Meyer said the new coach would have input in personnel decisions, but Thomas will have the final voice if there are conflicts.

The naming of Meyer, 51, Tuesday by 49er President Edward J. DeBartolo Jr. ended a two-week search during which four persons, all offense-oriented, were seriously considered, Thomas said. He did not name the three not chosen.

The search started when Clark, who guided the 49ers to an 8-6 record in his first year as a National Football League coach, was ousted because he refused to renegotiate a contract which gave him much of the power now wielded by Thomas.

Clark had indicated that while he was willing to give up some of his control over personnel, the measure of authority he felt he needed would not be compatible with Thomas' role. Thomas said he decided on Meyer, a 49er assistant coach in 1968, because he had been with winning teams and knew the NFL's western division and its personnel.

Meyer said his three-year contract for an undisclosed sum was the fulfillment of the dream of any assistant and promised to deliver "an aggressive, hard-hitting, well-disciplined football team."

"One thing I know from my years in football is that you win with the defense," he added. "Offensively we want a balanced attack. We will have a team on the field that will move the football and score."

Meyer has been an assistant coach for 24 seasons, starting at his alma mater, Denison College in Ohio, and coaching at Wake Forest, Florida State and Alabama before joining the 49ers in 1968.

He was an assistant under Weeb Ewbank with the New York Jets for four season before joining Chuck Knox at the Rams in 1973. Meyer had worked with Knox at Wake Forest.

Lakes ready for summer

As summer approaches, Missouri's lakes are all ready for fun as usual -- more or less. After a dry summer in 1976 and a harsh winter, some of the state's lakes went into this spring with low water levels. But the word now, according to the state's Division of Tourism, is that water levels should be no problem for summer vacationers.

Around the state, local officials are agreed that spring rains hold the key to lake water levels for summer. Even so, they say, the low water level is not as much of a problem as some might think, so all systems are "go" for another year of fun on Missouri's lakes.

At central Missouri's huge Lake of the Ozarks, the dry summer and peak power generation demands during the winter combined to drop water levels drastically. Now, however, water levels are rising and winter damage to docks and marinas is being repaired. Union Electric Company, which uses the lake for hydro-electric power, notes that demand for electricity is always down during the spring, which helps the lake to rise.

Tom Schultz, executive director of the Lake of the Ozarks Association, feels the problem has been over- emphasized. "Our lake may be a bit low," he says, "but we still have plenty of water. If you figure the lake has about 650 billion gallons of water at its fullest, then we still have about 600 billion gallons left -- and that's lots of water for boating, skiing, swimming, fishing and so on. Besides, we're only down about 6 feet from what would be normal at this time of year, and that's not bad at all."

Operators of tourist facilities at the lake agree they'll be ready for the vacation season. Charley Page, of Page Boat Yard at Gravois Mills, says, "In another couple of weeks, say by the first of May, the water level should be up to where we can live with it. All the commercial facilities should be repaired by June for vacationers, so we're looking for a good summer." Jim Muff, of Link's Landing at Osage Beach, notes that the marina's houseboat rentals for the summer and boat sales are way ahead of last year, indicating a growing interest in lake vacations. He admits, however, that facilities on some arms of the 95-square-mile lake have suffered extensive damage due to their generally lower water level.

At other major lakes nearby, the problems vary. Next to the Lake of the Ozarks, 25,000- acre Lake Stockton has received the most adverse publicity about low water. Yet according to Morris Bird, until recently president of the Lake Stockton Association, the problem is on its way to being solved. "Our water has been rising over the past few weeks," he says. "It's still low, but the low water is no real problem for fishing or other types of recreation. In fact, the fishing right now is better than usual. With normal spring rains, we expect that by June the water level here will be near-normal, as far as recreation is concerned." In spite of earlier low water conditions, he says that docks and other facilities at the lake haven't been extensively damaged.

At nearby Lake Pomme de Terre, low water hasn't been a problem. According to Bob Harvey, president of the Lake Pomme de Terre League, the lake is only about one foot below normal. "Our lake is primarily a flood-control lake," he notes, "so we haven't had low water levels caused by power generation. We expect normal levels this summer and we expect to have a good travel season."

The border lakes of southwest Missouri also sound a note of cautious optimism. Tom Heter, executive manager of the Ozark Playgrounds Association, says that early indicators point to a good increase in tourism this year. "With water levels coming back up," he says, "we expect an excellent travel season."

L. B. Cook, operator of a marina, resort and campground on Bull Shoals Lake, points out that low water hasn't damaged docks and other facilities there as it has elsewhere. While the lake is still low and may continue low for some time, he notes that there's still plenty of water and that the fishing is "better than it's been for three or four years."

Conditions are similar at other border lakes. According to Jim Stokes, executive manager of the Branson Lakes Area Chamber of Commerce, Missouri's lakes are better able to stand a drop in water level than those in some other states. "Sometimes, people overlook the fact that we've got deep-water lakes here," he says, "so a drop doesn't hurt their recreational value. The water is down somewhat but we still have worlds of water for recreation. Lake Taneycomo is at normal levels and with normal spring rains, Table Rock and the others should be near power pool by summer."

To the east, Lakes Wappapello and Clearwater apparently have avoided the problems besetting some other Missouri lakes. Both lakes, in the Ozarks of southeast Missouri, have benefitted from a somewhat wetter summer last year and different use patterns.

Jim Wohlschlaeger, who heads the clearwater Lake Association, notes that the lake isn't used for power generation, so there has been no drain on the water level. "Right now our water levels are above normal," he says, "and we expect to go into June with levels above normal. In fact, we've been told it would take 40 days without rain to bring the lake back down to normal -- and obviously we'll be having more rain this spring."

The situation seems to be the same at Lake Wappapello, which is even higher than its neighbor lake. A recent report from the Missouri Department of Conservation listed Lake Wappapello as being 16 feet high.

One consistent factor at almost all the lakes is improved fishing. Because of the low water levels, or maybe in spite of them, fishing is said to be excellent throughout the state.

At the Lake of the Ozarks, Jim Muff reports that "the water's beautiful and clear -- fishing's great." At nearby Stockton and Pomme de Terre, fishing is said to be good for crappie, bass and other species. And Jim Stokes says fishing in the border lakes is better this spring than it has been for four or five years.

So, if April showers are followed by more showers in May, as is usually the case in Missouri, the state's lakes, ponds and rivers should be in good shape for summer. And since Missouri's abundance of water is one of its most popular features, vacationers and businessmen alike are hoping that's just how it happens.

Second IN COMMAND

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard Sportswriter

Sikeston's track team continues to improve, meet by meet, and common sense is all it takes to figure out that the improvement is due to the dedication of the coaches and participants themselves. The lack of depth is all that keeps Sikeston from giving the Cape Central track team serious competition, and Cape has no equal among the track units in the Semo area.

Injury to sprinter Glynn Felton was very harmful to the Sikeston picture. Junior Morrell Baker has stepped in and done quite an admirable job, winning at the recent Dexter invitational in the 100-yard dash competition.

John Holloway is one of the most well-rounded athletes in the entire district. He is a threat to win any or all of three individual events: the 440, the high jump and the long jump. Holloway occasionally runs on relay teams as well.

Hurdle-man Don Atkinson gets better every time out and long distance runners Kevin Goetz and John Waltrip are extremely proficient in their events. Goetz usually runs the half-mile near the two-minute mark and Waltrip is the area's best miler.

It would be very hard in the space provided to recognize all the SHS track team members. There can only be a tip of he SIC hat to those like Mike Shell, Alan Chasteen and Atkinson -- all underclassmen who make the track future look so rosy.

Usually, attendance at a track meet is just incidental. Why not show these young men that their efforts are appreciated, also?

For us to do the best job possible in covering local sports, Sports Editor Charlie Francis and this writer need your response in order to remain in touch with the fans, as well as players and coaches. Anyone who can't improve himself by listening to valid and constructive criticism in this profession, ususally finds himself with a narrow and limited future.

Too often unrational criticism comes from corners where the commentor hasn't bothered to read a story carefully or hasn't WANTED to understand what a story actually said or meant. On the other side of the coin, many readers zip their lips for fear of insulting or alienating the reporter. I would like to think that this is not the case at the Daily Standard sports desk.

We want to hear from you, when we do right and when we do wrong. It is the only way for us to get better.

In the end you, the reader, will benefit, too.

The Bi-State League opens play in less than a month for Sikeston and the team, comprised mainly of college players and those just graduating who are eligible, has been practicing on weekends recently. All team members from last year, whether desirours of playing or not, should get in touch with me (at 471-4420) to make uniform arrangements.

The first official team practice will be held this Sunday afternoon. Time (probably around 2 p.m.) will bel announced.

There will be no formal tryouts this season, although there are still some spots open on the roster.

Speaking of the Saints, and this takes on the characteristics of shooting in the dark until after the first practice, pitchers like Jeff Jackson, Mike Brasher, Glen Alexander and Ricky Taylor are numbered among the mound contenders.

Hitters like Jim Saulter, Bill Schatzley, Rick Eisenbach, David Shell, Brasher, Taylor and Bruce Lawrence promise a lot of runs.

The season could -- and should -- be an exciting one.

Maybe even better than last year's second place finish.

mobile home trailer court classification. It was pointed out that the lots for the mobile homes are A-single family size, which are nearly twice as large as most mobile home lots.

Another rezoning request was made by James R. Harris, who asked that Tracts one, two and three of Lot 36 in the L. A. Smith addition be rezoned from the A single- family group to B two-family. Harris intends to build duplexes on the property. Neighbors at the meeting said they think two-family dwellings will bring about a sloppy appearance to the neighborhood because people will not keep up their property.

Harris said he intends to build comfortable duplexes that he believes will be an asset to the neighborhood and the commission approved the request, citing the housing shortage as a contributing factor.

Rezoning was also approved in a request made by Allen Hubbard to rezone Lot 2, Block 7 in the Hunter Acres Subdivision from A single- family to C multiple- family. Property adjoining Hubbard's has been zoned for multiple family.

Tabled was a request from Nedria Vanover to rezone Outblock 28 from Tanner to Lake from the C multiple - family classification to D-Commercial. She wants to operate a beauty shop in a building behind her home. The commission tabled her request for further study.

The woman had previously requested rezoning of her lot only for the same purpose, but because the request involved spot zoning, the commission denied it.

At the end of the meeting, the commission once again discussed the proposed lot survey ordinance. A lot corner survey requirement has been suggested to ensure that a home is actually on the property it is supposed to occupy.

Commission members believed the measure would add to the already inflated cost of building homes by requiring the services of a surverying team and tabled the matter for additional study.

Carter approves crop support hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has agreed to higher federal support for major farm crops beginning in 1978, including hefty boosts for wheat and corn above what the administration had previously recommended to Congress, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced Tuesday.

Bergland said the decision was reached Monday night in a meeting at the White House with Carter. He described the new proposal as a major change in the administration's stance on new farm legislation.

"The President told me that it was apparent to him that the program we had proposed earlier needed changes to gain stronger support among farm groups and on Capitol Hill," Bergland said. "He also told me that such passage was vital to the economic welfare of farmers; to maintain export markets, and to assure stable consumer prices and adequate reserves of food."

Bergland made the announcement at a meeting of farm-magazine editors.

Congress is considering new farm legislation and there has been strong support for higher farm price supports than the administration originally recommended.

Bergland said the increases approved by Carter would cost taxpayers an estimated $1 billion over four years above what had been first proposed, effectively doubling the administration's original farm-program costs.

He cautioned Congress against raising the price even higher.

The higher cost of the program puts it "dangerously close to the administration's spending limit," he said, and if Congress sweetens it further the legislation faces "a serious threat of veto" by Carter.

Under the new plan, the so-called target price of wheat in 1978 would be $2.90 a bushel, compared with $2.60 originally recommended by the administration.

When farmers' cash market prices fall below the target price, government payments are made to farmers to make up the difference. Those are also called "income support" levels.

The corn target price was proposed at $2 a bushel, up from $1.75 previously; rice $7.20 per 100 pounds, up from $6.75; and cotton, 50 cents a pound, up from 47.5 cents.

Car hits tree; woman hurt

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Patty Jean Jones, 22, of Cape Girardeau received minor injuries Tuesday in a one-car accident on Oriole Road eight miles north of town.

According to the highway patrol, the accident occurred at 8 a.m. as Mrs. Jones was driving south on Oriole Road when she lost control of her car on loose gravel while rounding a curve, and the vehicle ran off the east side of the road and struck a tree.

Mrs. Jones was taken to St. Francis Medical Center in Cape Girardeau by a passing motorist.

Jean Baptiste Point du Sable (1750-1818), a black pioneer trader, was the first settler of Chicago (1779).

Labor law to be reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed to review the constitutionality of the federal law authorizing Labor Department inspectors to make unannounced visits to factories and other work places to check health and safety hazards.

The justices voted to hear the government's appeal of a decision by a three-judge federal court in Idaho striking down the law as a violation of the Fourth Amendment protection of privacy.

The lower court ruling "would seriously impair effective implementation of federal legislation designed to protect the health and safety of the nation's workforce," warned attorneys from the Labor and Justice departments.

Barlow's Inc., a plumbing and heating installation business in Pocatello, Idaho, filed the suit challenging the statute after a court ordered the firm to admit an inspector for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The three-judge court declared the OSHA law unconstitutional on grounds that inspections conducted without court warrants violate the constitutional ban on unreasonable searches of private premises.

The judges ordered the government to suspend inspections at the Idaho firm and every other business in the country. But Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist last February blocked the national aspect of the injunction. He allowed the ban against inspections of Barlow's to stay in effect.

In other action, the court:

—Refused to hear an appeal charging that Pennsylvania discriminates against whites in the hiring and promotion policies of its state police. A lower court said claims of "reverse discrimination" cannot be considered because the policies adhere to a 1974 legal agreement aimed at ending past discrimination against blacks.

—Agreed to decide whether a medical school can dismiss a student without giving him a chance to defend his academic record. A lower court said the University of Missouri School of Medicine in Kansas City must reinstate the student and grant an administrative hearing.

—Said it will review a Massachusetts law barring corporations from spending money to oppose any proposed law not "materially affecting" them. The Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled the law is valid.

—Agreed to decide whether public officials must pay substantial sums, a token dollar or nothing at all when they deprive citizens of their civil rights but cause them no clear financial harm. A lower court said victims of civil rights violations are entitled to collect reasonable money damages from the officials who violated their rights.

Farmers shift towards more soybean crops

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri farmers, trying to rebound from economic losses sustained during three straight years of drought, have shifted their emphasis toward soybeans and the anticipated high market prices they will bring.

Federal crop estimates released on Thursday showed Missouri farmers following the national trend this year and expecting to plant more acres of soybeans and less of corn than they did in 1976.

Based on April 1 field surveys, Missouri farmers will plant 4.6 million acres of soybeans compared to 4.3 million acres last year, a 7 per cent increase, but only 3 million acres of corn compared to 3.2 million a year ago, a 6 per cent decline.

The U.S. Agriculture Department forecast increased the January projections for soybeans and further decreased the January projections for corn. Those two crops are the mainstays for Missouri farms.

But even with corn acreage down, the federal government's latest field crop estimate for 1977 does not suggest problems for consumers.

"Even with the corn-planted acreage down somewhat, as far as the present supplies are concerned and the carryover there should be sufficient feed grains available unless we have a bad drought," said William Murphy, field crop specialist for the University of Missouri Extension Division.

"So the impact should not be particularly great in any way, shape or form on consumers," Murphy said, "and soybeans go into food products also, so an increase there should more than offset any decrease in corn."

Soybeans, which are expected to sell at about twice the price per bushel this fall as corn, can withstand longer periods of mid and late summer drought, and Deputy Director J. W. Abbott of the state Agriculture Department said the prospect of another dry summer is in the back of many farmers' minds.

"Right now, everything would be indicating that we've got a continuing problem with our moisture situation," Abbott said. "I'm sure that has affected their thoughts on planting."

Water reserves in half the state are presently inadequate, according to University of Missouri researchers, and above normal rainfall will be needed this spring to replenish needed subsoil moisture. But the prospects for adequate rainfall, the researchers said, are dim.

Optimistic projections for bumper Missouri corn and soybean crops in 1974, 1975 and 1976 were dashed by late June of each year as the worst drought since the dustbowl days of the mid-1950s parched the state.

The average per acre yield for corn during the last three drought years was only 59.5 bushels compared to the 10-year average of 72.7 bushels.

Soybeans averaged 22.3 bushels an acre during the drought years compared to 24.6 bushels an acre over the past 10 years.

Tougher auto pollution controls may be delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration asked Congress to delay tough-er controls on air pollution from automobiles a year or more and to impose a tax on cars that fail to meet standards the government might propose for 1983.

Douglas M. Costle, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said the standards might increase the consumer price of automobiles by $65 to $125. He said the tax against non-complying cars would keep them from having a price advantage.

Costle proposed delays in imposing standards for the emission of hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides that were scheduled to go into effect when 1978 automobiles roll off assembly lines later this year.

Costle disclosed the proposal at a White House briefing before testifying before Congress. He said he would decide in 1980 whether strict standards against nitrogen oxide emissions would be proposed.

"Clean air is not an aesthetic luxury; it is a public health necessity," Costle said in a statement at the White House.

But, he said, "environmental issues do not exist in a vacuum. Environmental requirements must be carefully examined and related to our economic and energy goals."

He said the Carter administration "is fully committed to the principle that our nation must have a strong environmental program as a necessary prerequisite to future progress in solving our energy and economic problems."

Costle said President Carter recommended that:

—The statutory standard for hydrocarbons of .41 grams per mile be met beginning with the 1979 model year. Under current law, this standard would have been imposed in the 1978 model year.

—The standard for carbon monoxide should be set at 9.0 grams per mile in 1979, with the statutory standard of 3.4 grams per mile in effect beginning with the 1981 model year. Under current law, the 1978 standard would be 3.4 grams per mile.

—The standard for nitrogen oxides should be set at 2.0 grams per mile in 1979 and 1.0 grams per mile in the 1981 model year and would remain at that level in the future unless the environmental agency decides by 1980 that health requirements dictate a standard of 0.4 grams per mile beginning in 1983. Under current law the nitrogen oxide limit would be set at 0.4 grams per mile beginning with the 1978 model year.

Hydrocarbons aggravate asthma and chronic lung disease and can affect healthy people through changes in lung function, headaches and eye irritation.

Carbon monoxide aggravates heart disease, anemia and lung disease, can impair reflexes, and affect vision and the central nervous system.

Nitrogen oxides aggravate asthma and emphysema. Children are especially susceptible to problems stemming from excess nitrogen oxides in the air.

Costle said the standards were "tough but fair."

"They are consistent with our fuel standards," he said. "They will help reduce urban smog and protect public health."

House and Senate committees have been working on amendments to the Clean Air Act over the last six weeks.

A House subcommittee recently recommended postponing emission standards on hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide until the 1980 model year and delaying the tighter standards for nitrogen oxides until the 1982 model year.

A Senate subcommittee agreed to a one-year postponement in the standards for hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide and a delay until 1980 in imposing tighter standards for emissions of nitrogen oxides.

Major auto manufacturers said it would be impossible to meet the original deadlines imposed for the 1980 model year.

The act covers, in addition to limits on air pollution for automobiles, emissions from such stationary sources as power plants and factories.

Costle said Carter supports inclusion in the act "of a provision to limit additions of new pollutants in areas which are already clean to certain specified levels."

Costle said the administration would ask Congress to delay for one year any action related to new industrial growth in areas now violating air pollution standards, this would be to allow administration study of the issue.

Costle said that the administration was committed to meeting energy goals without compromising environmental objectives. He said the recommendations "provide a solid environmental foundation" for the over-all energy program the President is announcing this week.

Mrs. Wallhausen
Charleston Enterprise-Courier
Charleston, Missouri 63834

Dear Mrs. Wallhausen:

I was distressed to read your column of March 10 and your letter to the Sikeston Standard where you presented as truth several erroneous reports about the Missouri Executive Mansion and Mrs. Carolyn Bond.

You stated that Mrs. Bond considered the upstairs furnishing as the Mansion "junk" and had it cleaned out and auctioned off as "junk" surplus, with the result that valuable antiques and gifts to the Mansion were "all gone".

That is simply not true and I would like to see the record straight.

The furniture from the four second floor rooms Governor and Mrs. Bond used as their personal quarters was stored carefully, photographed and inventoried. The stored furniture included enough furniture to adequately furnish seven bedrooms comfortably, as well as a large collection of sofas, chairs, end tables and lamps. As is the governor's choice, the Bond's selected these second floor rooms in which to live and as such moved their personal furnishings into the Mansion. They took their furniture, rugs and draperies which they paid for personally with them when they left.

Although Mrs. Bond inherited an inventory that merely listed, "1 chair, 1 table, 1 lamp..." she left a sepcific numbered inventory which was compiled as nearly like a museum or art gallery inventory as possible. Each inventory card listed detailed descriptions, historical background, donors, and a photograph of each piece. The card file we made included entries of over 400 pieces of furniture, works of art and memorabilia. Gifts from Arrow Rock, former governors and individuals are noted carefully. This inventory was compiled by Mrs. Bond's staff, myself included, and was left in the Mansion office when we left on January 10, 1977.

If you would like to see this inventory, please let me know and I will share with you a copy. The original is at the Mansion.

Included in the inventory, (and I might add that each piece of furniture, painting, silver tray, etc., are numbered and coded with the corresponding number appearing on the inventory cards), is the Crittenden furniture you mentioned. It was given to the Mansion by Governor and Mrs. Thomas Crittenden and like all other former governor's gifts, was on display at the Mansion during the Bond administration. No gifts of governors were ever discarded and such a thing would not have been considered by Mrs. Bond.

The Arrow Rock pieces were likewise used and often pointed out with pride to visitors. They were displayed on the first and third floors while the Crittenden bedroom furniture was used in a guest room on the third floor.

In 1973, a few items at the Mansion were declared as surplus property, as is the practice throughout the state government when things are worn out an of no use or value. The Mansion items auctioned included worn and broken appliances, several very ordinary, inexpensive chairs and other modern style furniture not appropriate and not worth repairing or storing. Before auctioning, all of these items were examined by an interior decorator widely respected as an expert in Victorian antiques.

Unfortunately, rumors do fly about furniture said to have come from the Governor's Mansion. Upon investigation this is very rarely the case, but it is understandable people would like to believe that they now owned a piece of furniture once used by a governor of Missuri.

In your column you mentioned the need for a regulatory group to oversee the maintenance and care of the Mansion. Mrs. Bond formed such a group, called Missouri Mansion Preservation, Inc., in October 1974. Patterened after Mrs. Jackie Kennedy's White House Fine Arts Commission, MMP was incorporated to assist the sate in the proper period restoration of the 1871 Missouri Governor's Mansion. MMP is a not-for-profit, nonpartisan, tax-exempt corporation designed to provide continuity from administratin to administration. A list of the distinguished members of the Board of Directors of MMP is enclosed.

Under the direction of Mrs. Bond and MMP the first floor Library at the Mansion was restored to the 1870 period and was dedicated at a public ceremony August 10, 1976, the 105th anniversary of Missouri statehood.

MMP raised the funds and collected furnishings from private sources to furnish the Library. With their support the General Assembly appropriate over $435,000 last year to supply structural work and most importantly, the funds for installation of a central heating, cooling and fire protection system. The Missouri Mansion is the only governors' residence in the nation without these life safety systems.

In all, Mrs. Bond spearheaded the drive to raise over $225,000 in private donations of money, furnishings and works of art. These treasures are inventoried by Missouri Mansion Preservation, Inc., and are on display at the Mansion. A copy of this inventory was left in the Mansion office on January 10, 1977, I was Mrs. Bond's assistant for MMP and would be happy to answer any additonal questions you may have about this organization and its activities. Feature articles have been published in most of the major newspapers in the state as well as magazines and reports over radio and television. MMP's efforts were endorsed by every major Missouri newspaper and over 40 historical societies.

It is hoped that through the organizationand efforts of MMP, their tour guide program, the state and the first lady the Mansion continues to be the great symbol of pride and heritage it is today. I am sure the over 250,000 persons who toured the Mansion during the Bond's tenure will tell you about the historical treasures it holds for all Missourians.

I hope you will share with your readers this information about the great Renaissance Mansion in Jefferson City. All Missourians should be proud of this great house, for it belongs to each of us.

Thank you for the opportunity to share with you the many exciting things Mrs. Bond did while she lived at 100 Madison. In researching the history of the house one learns to appreciate the contributions of many first ladies. I hope that it is time finally to no longer treat the future of the Mansion as a political football, but the important historic structure it is.

Please let me know if I may be of further assistance.

Sincerely yours,
Linda L. Brown

Today in U.S. history

By the Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, April 20, the 110th day of 1977. There are 255 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1775, the siege of Boston began in the American Revolution.

On this date:

In 1657, Jews in New Amsterdam were granted equal rights and privileges of citizens.

In 1662, Connecticut was granted a royal charter extending to the Pacific Ocean.

In 1836, Congress established the Territory of Wisconsin.

In 1889, Adolf Hitler was born in Austria.

In 1934, Shirley Temple was launched on her career as a child star as the film, "Stand up and Cheer," was released.

In 1945, in World War II, Soviet forces penetrated the defenses of Berlin, and the U.S. 7th Army captured the German city of Nuernberg.

Ten years ago: U.S. Navy jets blasted electric power plants in Haiphong, leaving much of the North Vietnamese port in darkness.

Five years ago: The Apollo 16 astronauts made a smooth landing on the moon, after a delay due to malfunction of guidance equipment.

One year ago: President Gerald Ford received a tax refund of $11,000 for 1975.

Today's birthday: Nuclear physicist Alvin Weinberg is 62 years old. The Spanish painter, Joan Miro, is 84.

Thought for today: Gratitude is the sign of noble souls — Aesop's Fables.

The torpedo fish, of the same family as skates and rays, has an advantage over its cousins. It can turn on an electric current at will, using this shock apparatus to stun or kill the smaller animals it eats as well as to protect itself.

Woman rescues boys

NEW BRIGHTON, Minn. (AP) — With her bare hands and lots of determination, Susan Burzynski unearthed two brothers who were buried under a collapsed sand bank. Police and firemen rescued a third.

Gerald Foley, 3, was in good condition today at Children's Health Center. Brothers Richard, 10, and Phillip, 8, weren't completely buried and didn't require hospitalization.

The three boys, another brother, John Foley, 12, and an unidentified youth were playing in a construction excavation when the accident happened Sunday afternoon.

John ran to the house nearest the site and banged on the door. Inside, Mrs. Casmir Burzynski heard his plea, "Oh, please let somebody be home."

Mrs. Burzynski opened the door and John told her, "My brothers are buried!"

Her daughter Susan, 24, who lives in Columbia Heights but had been home on a visit, ran to the excavation while Mrs. Burzynski telephoned authorities and neighbors before joining her daughter.

Susan worked furiously to rescue the boys. She found one buried to his chin and another with only his legs protruding from the sand.

"One boy's head was visible, but his mouth and eyes were full of sand, and I got the sand out of his mouth," she said. "Then I started digging out the boy whose legs were showing. I let the other boy (John) work on the first boy."

Using her hands, Miss Burzynski clawed sand and pushed away rocks until the boy was free to his waist. She was unable to pull him free until she scratched away sand to his armpits.

"After I yanked him free, I set him right side up and got the sand out of his mouth," Miss Burzynski related.

At some point, during her digging, Miss Buzynski learned from the brothers that a third boy was still trapped in the sand — completely covered.

"I couldn't see the third one, and that's what made it so horrible," she said.

By then, the help summoned by her mother had arrived. New Brighton police, firemen and neighbors took over. They uncovered Gerald and finished freeing the other boy.

Gerald wasn't breathing and had no pulse when he was unearthed. Chief Jerald Frieden said firemen successfully revived the youth, who was listed in serious condition when admitted to the hospital.

Mr. Charlie Blanton
Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Charlie:

Today I have on my archaeological hat on. This has nothing to do with SEX or blood-all-over-the-floor violence, but it IS still important to a lot of folks.

You have already had an article on this (Friday's issue) "Archaeologist says articles distorted". Thanks.

I received a phone call from our good friend of some 30 years, Dr. Carl Chapman. You know him for his many trips to our area and the Digs here.

He was quite upset over those articles published in the K.C. Times about some of the research projects at UMC. He said the writer is a friend of a guy who didn't get his Master's degree, so he's out to "GET" the projects any way he can.

So Carl has sent me releases containing basic information that needs to be known about just HOW archaeological research and funding is done.

We hope you can use it. Over the years, to us and many other people, Carl has been the epitome of the right guy in the right career ... with the right training and complete dedication and experience for his work. We are VERY fortunate to have the likes of him studying and labeling this part of our American heritage for us, so that we and all those who come after us will have a chance to understand ... before it's all plowed under.

Do what you can, please. Thanks.

Sincerely, Millie
Mrs. Art L. Wallhausen Sr.

BACKGROUNDER -- AMERICAN ARCHAEOLOGY DIVISION

Archaeological Research and Funding

In recent years research in American archaeology has had a funding base which permits survey, excavation, analysis and publication of the results of studies on cultural resources never before available. Faced with an unrealistically low amount of funds in the past to do professional work, archaeologists have often been forced to rely up on volunteer help just to get the minimum data necessary on archaeological and historical sites which are about to be destroyed.

Numerous interested non-professionals who have assisted in gathering information were rewarded with acknowledgement in the final report, an opportunity to work with professional researchers, and a knowledge that they helped gather information which might otherwise be lost.

The demands of time deadlines for construction projects and federal legal requirements to evaluate cultural resources, while providing the funding base, also brings home the fact that large amounts of services were dontated both by individuals and institutions in the past.

At the University of Missouri the American Archaeology Division (founded in 1937 as the Archaeological Research Experiment Station) is part of the Department of Anthropoloby. While primarily a research organization it performs teaching and service functions as well, providing experience to students in field and laboratory techniques, cultural resource management, and interagency planning.

The division combines scholarly research with cultural resource preservation. It maintains, in the Archaelological Survey of Missouri, file on known archaeological and historical sites in the state. Preservation of these sites is accomplished in cooperation with the Missiouri Department of Natural Resources' Office of Historical Preservation.

During the 1975-1976 fiscal-year, the UMC Anthropology department was awarded more grant funds from the National Science Foundation than any other such department in the nation. Grant expenditures from all sources for the American Archaeology Division alone in 1975-1976 totaled $368,039 and involved 26 projects ranging from the Truman Reservoir site survey to continuing investigation of strata at the Natural Trap, Wyoming excavation. The grants, some of which span more than one year, generated $66,370 for the University's general fund as indirect cost reimbursements.

While funds from federal and other external sources have provided increased opportunities for field work, state budgetary restrictions have caused a reduction of staff and operating expenses for the division.

Increased demands on the Division's services grow from the following federal actions:

— Public Law 93-291 (The Archaeological Conservation Act) provides for recovery, protection and preservation of scientific, prehistoric, historic, or archaeological data whenever loss of such data is threatened by federal or federally-licensed projects. Federal agencies are authorized to spend up to one percent of total project costs in the function.

— Executive Order 11593 mandates that all Executive Branch offices compile an inventory of cultural resources under their jurisdiction, nominate eligible government properties for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places, and preserve and protect these resources.

— Public Law 91-190 requires the preparation of an "environmental impact statement" detailing possible damage to the environment measured against long- and short-term gains in any project affecting the environment.

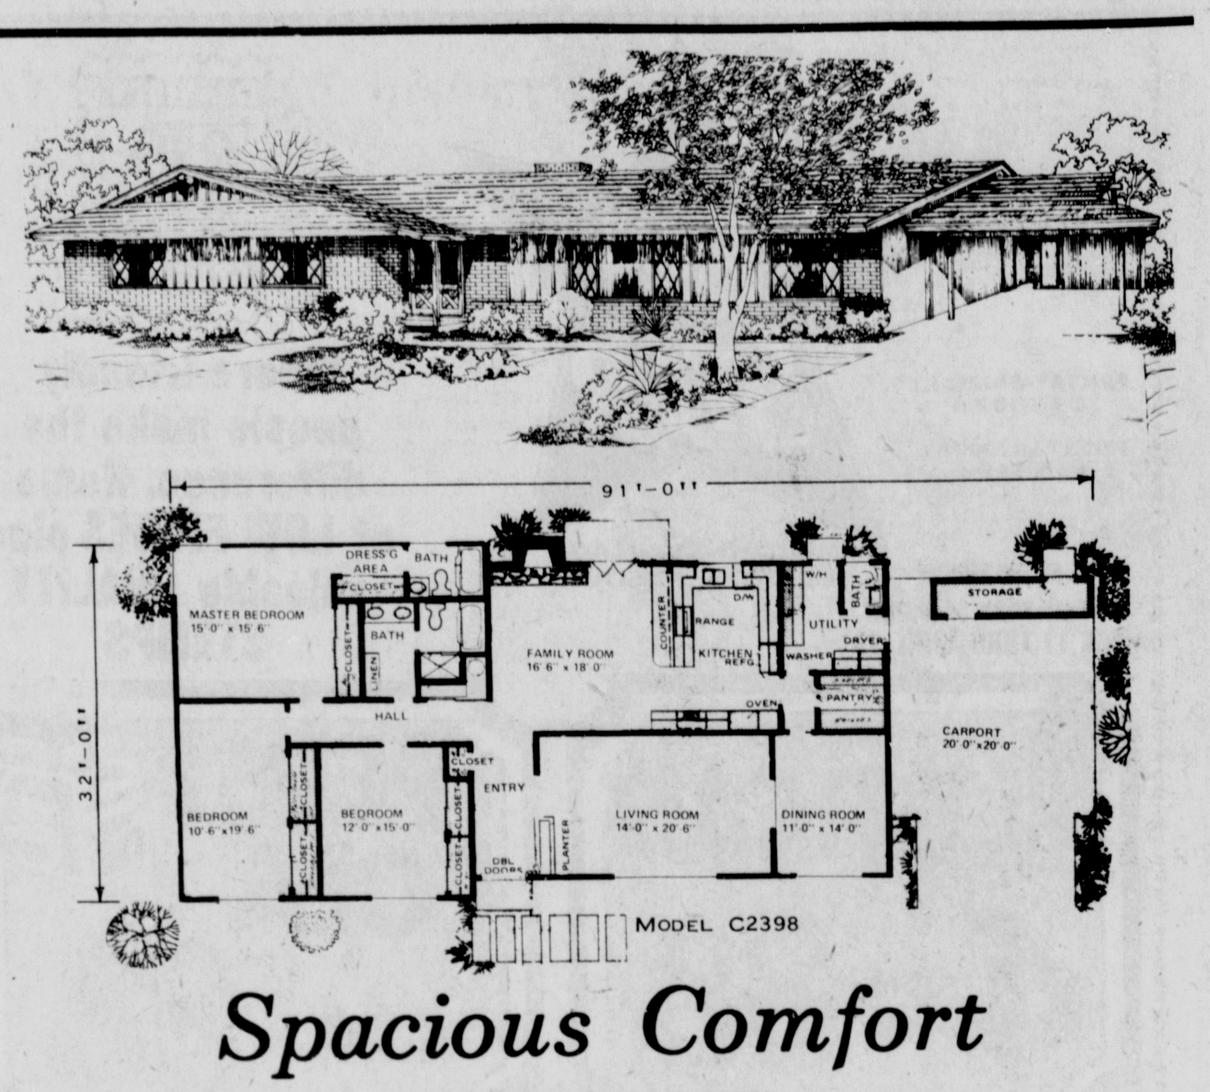

Dr. William Marquardt, director of the American Archaeology Division, states that "the fact that many of the federal or federally-assisted projects are large, expensive, and complicated means that there is considerable money available when expertise in the recognition and preservation of cultural resources is necessary. Thus, archaeology in America is today 'big business.' It is necessary business if we are to assume the responsibility of preservation of our cultural resources and not relinquish the opportunity of studying scientifically the patterns and processes of the past.

"Federal, state, and local agencies that require cultural resources surveys or mitigation of the impact of construction projects on those resources have called on private consulting firms or individuals. Many of the individuals who carry out such private work are well-trained and competent, but some have no commitment to archaeology as a scientific discipline, no inclination to share their research results with their academic counterparts, and no appreciation for the scholarly responsibility to curate archaeological materials and information. The solution to the dilemma seems obvious: Archaeologists can and do operate in a business-like fashion from within a respected academic institution, applying the same high standards of scientific research to contract archaeology that they would to the problem-oriented research they would carry out if there were not dams and sewers and highways being built at the expense of the archaeological record. The Director of American Archaeology is committed to this premise. Every report prepared in fulfillment of a contract under the auspices of the Division must be of unquestionable scientific merit before it is submitted to the contracting agency, and no research commitments will be made if there is any doubt that the scholarly responsibilities for proper analysis and curation can be fulfilled."

The Division has worked closely with Missouri residents for 40 years in the location of archaeological sites. Area residents are often employed and trained in field work. In many cases, local volunteers help the Division's archaeologists in the recovery of artifiacts from sites.

Tours of sites and displays of findings are provided for area residents, and a museum is maintained at the Lyman Archaeological Research Center adjoining Van Mete State Park in Saline County.

Concluding, the Division's director, Marquardt states: "Archaeologists are often in contact with Missourians from all walks of life. We have observed that almost all seem to be interested in the past. But it is a mistake to think that this represents a backward mistrust of the new or unusual... We believe that the people want a responsive and involved, but scholarly University of the first quality. They are proud of the town and neighborhood in which they live, they think about their surroundings, and they want their heritage preserved, investigated, interpreted, and understood. What more appropriate service could a state university provide."

Spacious Comfort

2398 SQ.FT. LIVING AREA

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

This long, attractive ranch style design provides for comfortable living with its spacious plan.

Note the central entry behind those pretty double front doors. From it traffic flows smoothly to all parts of this spacious house without intruding upon the privacy of the rooms themselves.

On the right, a big living room gains added charm from the planter wall at the entry and the large front window. A formal dining room beside it makes leisurely meals a pleasure too.

Behind the dining room, a huge walk-in pantry provides a housewife pleaser all too rarely included in modern homes and a walk through utility area with an outside door at the back and a carport door too includes laundry and storage facilities and a most convenient half bath to spare the rest of the house the wear and tear of "backyard" traffic. There is a nice big outside storage room at the back of that double carport too.

Note next, the tremendous family room and kitchen in the back of the house for maximum privacy. There is a large stone raised hearth and a convenient dining counter in the family room end and the kitchen's commodious U-shaped work area is supplemented by additional units along one wall.

At the far end of the house the three bedrooms are all extra large with two closets apiece. Note that the main bath is conveniently compartmented with a double lavatory and the master bedroom has a handy dressing area.

THE VIKING PROCESS. By Norman Hartley. Simon & Schuster. 285 Pages. $7.95.

Here's another in the flood of novels about terrorists that seems to be washing through the bookstores these days.

"The Viking Process" concerns one Philip Russell. Russell, an authority on terrorism, is kidnapped by a band of terrorists called the "The Vikings" and forced to go along with them — his wife will be killed if he doesn't — in their plans to destroy a multinational corporation called Intermark.

The Vikings, a band of amoral young folk headed by — honest — Simon Peace, "the prototype new age sadist," think they are destroying Intermark in order to strike a blow at the establishment. In fact, they are being manipulated, albeit unknowingly, by another bigger multinational corporation named Globex which isn't motivated by any "lofty ideals" but simply wants to take over Intermark's lucrative markets.

What is Russell to do? Can he stop the Vikings without causing the death of his wife?

Well, if the reader is willing to wade through a fairly extensive sea of not terribly exciting pages he can find out the answer to these questions in a really smashing ending. An ending, by the way, that isn't very believable but, given the context, certainly impels the reader to turn the pages.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was born on March 8, 1841.

New roof put on building

April 20, 12917

The roof is being placed on the new Iron Mountain station at Sikeston this week. It is of red tile and will add much to the handsome appearance of the new building. The exterior work on the new station is pretty well completed, and is much ahead of the station being erected by the railroad company at Charleston.

A. F. Lindsay spent part of the past week with his parents in Grayville, Ill. While there he secured for the Lindsay Architectural Co., the contract for drawing plans and specifications for $12,000 colonial residence to be erected at Grayville.

The city council, at an adjourned meeting on Wednesday, provided for the holding of a special city election on May 15th, for the purpose of voting on the question of placing Sikeston in the third class of cities. This matter was considered by the Commercial Club, at the suggestion of Mayor Malone, some weeks ago and received the hearty endorsement of the club.

The back-to-the-farm movement has begun in the Sikeston schools. This week three high school boys, Arnold Stone, Virgil Randolph and Paul Witt were excused from their school work to help at home raising a war crop. These boys will receive full credit for their last semester's work.

The Sikeston school board met on last Thursday and re-elected nearly all of the present corps of teachers. The teachers elected last Thursday were: E.D. Lee, superintendent; Earl J. Van Vorne, principal, high school; Frank Smith, principal grammar school. High School--Miss Maud Phillips, W.E. Burnham, Miss Sora Barth, Miss Lillian Kirk, Miss Irvina Rose, and Miss Mary Rodes. Grammar school: F.V. Van Horne, Misses Leah Wylie, Effie Smith, Grace Conley, Lydia Chaney, Margaret Harris, Eva Hess, Rowena Hay, Mary Thomas, Louise Bergman, Lillian Bergman, and Susan E. Hay

In the singles matches David Marshall of Illmo defeated Tommy Marshall of Sikeston, 6-3 6-5; John Bowers of Illmo Won from Roger Fisher of Sikeston, 6-4, 6-0, and Ralph Pellett of Illmo defeated Bill Van Horne of Sikeston, 6-1, 6-1. In the doubles matches, Marshall and Ron Allen of Illmo defeated Charles Tanner and Clyde Long, Sikeston, 6-1, 6-1; and Pellett and Bowers won from Marvin Rayburn and Billy Van Arsdale of Sikeston; 6-4, 7-5.

The following members of the senior class are taking part in the production: Frances Fox, J.D. Nichols, Norma Bohannon, Vida Heath, Sanford Kirkpatrick, Norma Cunningham, Leona Wheeler, George Hesselrode, Norman Suter, Virginia Whiteside, Edward Council, and Edwin Ohmes.

E.J. Keith, Sikeston real estate dealer, last week finished marking 300 corners in East Acres Addition, just north of the high school and extending east to Highway 61. Lots are on sale on easy terms and building restrictions call for homes costing $2,000 or more.

One hundred new corners have recently been established in Smith Addition, east of Highway 61, extending back of Hennington's Paint & Trim Shop and south of Boardman Addition and west including the cotton oil mill.

Suzy Snooper

Hello there! As you all know by this time, it's time for the annual Sikeston Junior Woman's Club Red Stocking Follies. This year we have something new in store for you, "Suzy" Snooper.

"Suzy" is the Follies' random, anonymous, crack reporter. "Suzy" knows all, sees all, hears all, and to hear her tell it, does all. Sometimes she can be a little garish; but all in all she's a lot of fun. "Suzy" will be with us everyday to keep us posted on what is going on at the follies, both behind the scenes and stage front. "suzy" will be hinting at who does what, when they do it, and sometimes she might even tell us why; but knowing "Suzy" don't count on it all of the time. One thing, for sure, that we can count on is that "Suzy" is always on the job.

If any of you lovely people happen to see the follies' director, Tom Chatham, roaming around town looking like he's lost, he probably is, so please show him home... "Suzy" wants all of you darling people to s top BUTCH BLUMENBERG and ask him to show you what he has printed on his knees... "Suzy" wants to know if playing the trombone is as much fun as LA DONNA DE KRIEK makes it sound... dynamic SUE GREEN learned how to count to three and kick at the same time at rehearsals. "Suzy" says to keep up the good work SUE ... BOB NALLY, "Suzy" wants to know what that patch on the back of your jeans says... what local lady with the initials of P.M. is learning how to "bump and grind"? "Suzy" will be glad to help her if she's having trouble.

Oh folks, just in case you are interested, "Suzy" thought you might like to know that she taught the director everything he knows. Chatam offered her the lead in the show; but as usual she just could not fit it into her schedule; but she knows that YOU will. The show will be April 29 and 30 at Sikeston Middle School. Tickets are available from any Junior Woman's Club member, or by calling Karen Ramsey at 471-8206.

Richland kindergarten to pre-enroll

ESSEX — A pre-enrollment clinic for kindergarten children will be held at Richland West Elementary School in Essex April 21 from 9 a.m. to noon and from 3:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The pre-enrollment is for all kindergarten children who will attend the Richland Public Schools during the 1977- 78 school year. Children who will be five before Oct. 1 are eligible to attend kindergarten.

Children do not need to be present in order to be enrolled, but parents, or those who enroll the children, should bring birth certificates and immunization for diptheria, polio, measles and German measles (rubella).

The Richland Public Schools require a complete physical examination for entry into the school for the first time. A special form will be available at the time of enrollment and must be filled out by a physician as soon as possible.

Missouri medical group opposes saccharin ban

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For the second time in recent weeks a Missouri medical group has passed a resolution opposing the proposed ban on the artificial sweetener saccharin.

Delegates to the Missouri State Medical Association approved the resolution during a weekend meeting in St. Louis.

The resolution asks federal officials to reconsider the saccharin cutoff, which is scheduled to go into effect in July.

In addition, it urges the government to allow use of saccharin "provided all containers in which the artificial sweetner may be found bear a label indicating the amount of saccharin contained and identifying it as an ingredient of unproven safety."

The Missouri Osteopathic Association passed a similar resolution three weeks ago.

Last week, the Food and Drug Administration said it would allow continued sale of saccharin pills and powders if shown proof that saccharin is effective in controlling obesity and diabetes.

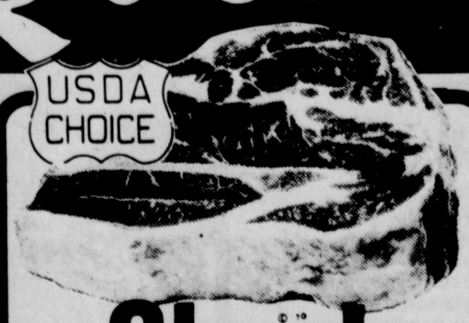

But the FDA said the use of the sweetener in soft drinks and food would be banned.

The prayer

"What does the Lord require of you but to justice, and to love kindness, nad to walk humbly with your God?" (Micah 6:8 RSV)

PRAYER: Father, we regret that we so often fail to love. Help us to be more mindful of and receptive to Thy will, that we may fulfill the purpose in life that Thou didst intend for us.

Crusade goal is $7,700

Scott County residents are among the more than two million volunteers of the American Cancer Society, nationwide, who are involved with recruitment and training in preparation for the April Cancer Crusade.

Organizing the crusade in Scott County have been Phil Barkett Jr., Scott County unit president; Mary Lou Montgomery, Sandra Sharp, John Davis, Addie Mae Jones of Sikeston; and Dale Stuckey of Benton.

The goal of the local unit this year is $7,700. The majority of this money will be raised by door-to-door canvassing throughtout the county and donations from area businessmen. The businesses are being canvassed throughout this month, while the door-to-door crusade is scheduled for April 28.

Money raised will be added to the approximately $1,600 raised Feb. 25 when the unit sponsored a dance at the Sikeston Country Club. Another fund-raising project, the annual fashion show, is scheduled for May.

At a recent area ACS meeting, Dr. David A. Strand of Cape Girardeau, SeMo Area ACS Crusade Chairman for the 1977 April Cancer Crusade, emphasized the importance of reaching every Scott County citizen with educational life-saving literature and at the same time, giving everyone the opportunity to contribute to the annual crusade. "The Society's year-round programs of research, education, service and rehabilitiation are made possible by funds contributed each year during the April Cancer Crusade," Dr. Strand commented.

It is estimated that 9,300 Missourians will be lost to cancer this year--more than one every hour, 24 hours a day. But the hopeful side of the cancer problem is that more lives are being saved than ever before. There are over three million Americans alive today who have a history of cancer; two million of them with diagnosis five or more years. For most forms of cancer, a person is considered cured if there is no evidence of the disease five years after diagnosis. The awareness of the "Seven Warning Signals" of cancer and the importance of the annual health check-up helping make possible early diagnosis and prompt treatment, will be stressed by Scott County ACS volunteers when calling on their friends and neighbors during the 1977 April Cancer Crusade.

Sponsored by the New Madrid Kiwanis Club, advance tickets are now on sale by Kiwanians, and will also be sold at the gate.

Proceeds from the event will be used for Kiwanis community projects.

Education meeting to be reviewed at Bernie workshop

BERNIE— Elmer E. Dunn, superintendent of schools of Bernie, has announced a workshop to review recommendations from the Governor's Conference on Education has been planned for April 28, at 7:00 p.m. at Bernie High School.

Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, District 25, Hornersville, will deliver opening remarks. Other members of the planning committee for the conference who will present current and up-to-date information are Carolyn Losos, president, Governor's Conference on Education; Thurston Hill, superintendent of schools, Dexter; Gordon R. Kutscher, executive director Missouri Advisory Council on Vocational Education, Jefferson City; and Mary D. Drake, Charleston.

Attendees will have an opportunity to participate in a discussion group of their choice on issues of accountability, early childhood and parent education, education finance, governance and vocational education.

Of particular interest to participants will be a booklet summarizing major conference recommendations, their intent and potential impact. Prepared by the St. Louis Conference on Education, in conjunction with the Implementation Committee ofthe Governor's Conference. This publication will be available during the workshop. Local school district Superintendents and legislators have been requested to invite friends of education, i.e. school board members, PTA members, lay members, teachers, day care center and college personnel.

Clifford Manlove, coordinator for the conference, said that even if you are not contacted personally, plan on attending and participating in this important workshop.

Former ag director named to Chamber of Commerce post

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The former director of the Missouri Department of Agriculture has been appointed to head a new division of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber announced Wednesday that James Boillot will head the newly formed Department of Agribusiness within the organization. Boillot served as head of the state Agriculture Department in the adminstration of former Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Glenn Scott, executive vice president of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce, noted the organization has been active in the agribusiness field for several years, but that the perceived growth potential and the expansion of economic education programs indicated the need for a separate agribusiness department.

Boillot said the new division will concntrate on assisting agribusiness, organizations, associations and companies to respond to governmental activities.

The new division will also help promote agricultural industry growth in the state and create public awareness of the importance of agribusiness activity in an attempt to foster a harmonious relationship between urban and rural communities.

The chamber will assist the land grant university system to meet its commitment to agriculture and agribusiness through adequate research, education and information, Boillot said.

Cancer volunteers to meet Thursday

DEXTER— Dr. Ronald Hill will discuss the importance of all individuals over the age of 40 participating in the colon-rectal screening program and will give instructions to volunteers for the dispersing of kits during Cancer Detection Days-May 5, 6, 7, at a meeting in the Dexter High School Auditorium, Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Many diseases of the intestinal tract result in small amounts of intermittent bleeding long before symptoms develop. This is especially true of colon and rectum cancer, which is (except for skin cancer), the commonest form of cancer. Colon and rectal cancer is usually simple to treat and cure when detected early, Cancer Detections Days officials said.

Traces of blood cannot usually be seen by the naked eye, but they can be detected by a chemical test. The Hemoccult Test Slide contains such a chemical.

"If traces of blood are found in the stool, it most likely does not mean you have colon-rectal cancer; if simply means that you should have a full evaluation of the gastrointestinal tract to determine the source of blood. Blood can be present in the stool from many sources: It can be ingested in food (from meat, fish or chicken). It can come from nosebleed or bleeding gums. It can come from internal bleeding such as a stomach or intestinal problems, or bleeding from hemorrhoids," medical officials said.

"All these sources are far more common than cancer; but since colon and rectal cancer is so easily treated when discovered early, it is important to detect early bleeding and to investigate it fully," Medical spokesmen noted.

Diet preparation is important in improving the sensitivity of this test. By taking a high roughage diet, early disease can be stimulated to bleed. Repeating the test three times increases the likelihood of detecting intermittent bleeding. Because blood can be present in stool from ingestion of meat, it is recommended that meat be eliminated from the diet during the test periods.

The screening program will be given free.
